

Last week, one of your activities was to research the Brazilian artist Eduardo Kobra and explore his murals and find ones that you liked. This week, you are going to begin a 2 week project where you will end up with a piece of art in the style of Eduardo Kobra. As you will have seen, Kobra often painted well-known people who might have contributed a lot to society or who were inspirational in some way. Below are his murals of Anne Frank and Albert Einstein.

This week, we would like you to sketch a picture of someone who you find inspirational or someone who you think has contributed a lot towards society. You will only be sketching this person and next week, we will focus on achieving the same kaleidoscope pattern that Kobra uses in his murals. At the beginning of Year 3, we looked at hatching and cross hatching when we explored sketching techniques. There are some pictures of these techniques below if you would like to try and use them in your sketches. It would also be great to see you write a few sentences about why you have chosen this person. You may choose to write your sentences in your homeworking book or on a separate piece of paper.
