

Everything you need to know about Stone Age !

Written and illustrated by Tvisha

Stone Age started about 26 million years ago. It was a time when history was not recorded. Archaeologists have found ancient clues to learn how primitive people lived. This text will tell you about where they lived, what they ate and what jobs they did. It will also include a quick quiz •

Content page

1. What did they eat
2. Where did live
3. What jobs did they do
4. Quiz

What did they eat

In the Palaeolithic era, they ate mammoths and stinky fish by grilling it on fire. However, they did not always catch food so they had to fight hunger. There were hunter-gatherers, men used to hunt and women gathered nuts and berries. In the Paleolithic era they needed to move houses to catch prey. In the Neolithic era, they made farms so they did not need to move houses. They also domesticated animals such as cats, sheep, dogs and cows.

Spear

Where did they live

In the Palaeolithic era, they lived in dark and artistic caves. Soon they started living in houses made from animal poop and mud (ew). They moved caves because they had to follow prey. In the Neolithic era, they lived in tents made from sticks and animal skin. It is also easy to fold and carry. Primitive people lit fires outside their caves so no animals (especially wild ones) come in.

They put fires outside like this

QUIZ

In the Mesolithic era did they live in

A. caves
B. houses
C. tents

Circle the answer with pen

Answer tents

What did they eat in the Palaeolithic era

- A. Cats
- B. Soda
- C. mammoths

Answer mammoths

What jobs did they do

One job that they did was making tools by striking flint onto a stone to make it sharp and attach a long piece of wood onto it to make a spear. In the Neolithic era, they started farms and made veggies so that was their job. In the Mesolithic era, they made tents. In the Palaeolithic era, they made spears, axes and arrows.

