

The Stone Age

The Stone Age began around 2.5 million years ago. They made some tools out of stone and lived in dark caves. They ate mammoths and sabre tooth tigers. The Stone Age started in Europe and carried on to Britain

Written by George

Contents

.What plants lived in the Stone Age?
Page 3

.What did they wear? Page 4

.What age did they live to? Page 5

.What animals
lived in the Stone
Age? Page 6

What plants lived in the Stone Age

The plants that lived in the Stone Age are nettles, dandelions, catmint, rue and more - these were used for medicine to keep them well. There are also loads of trees not just flowers.

What did they wear

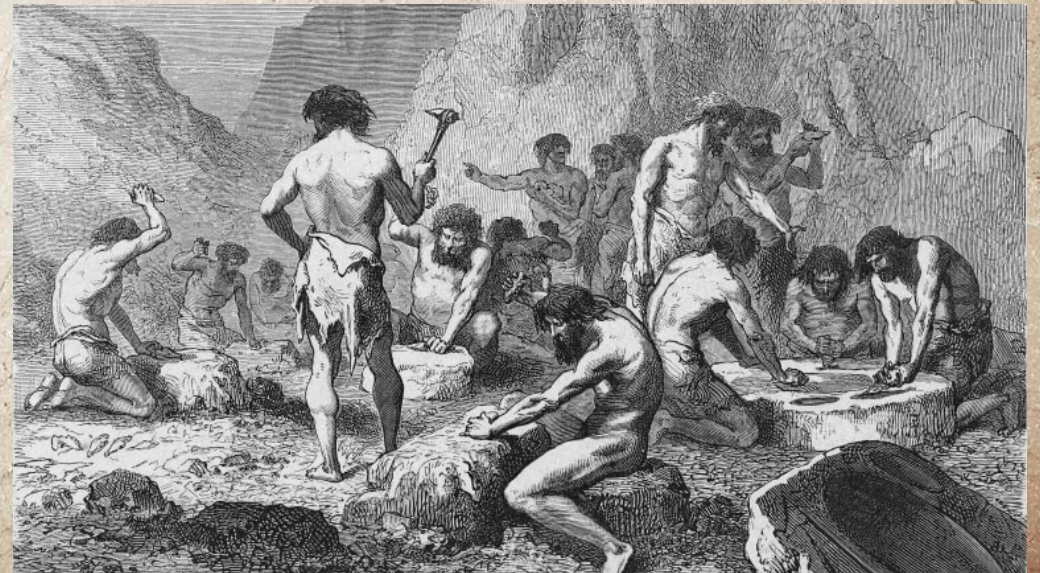

They wore clothes out of grasses and animal skins. The skin helped them be warm while hunting. Some clothes were woven from the stems of stinging nettles! They killed loads of animals to make clothes but especially woolly mammoths.

What age did they live to?

The average life of expectancy of a cave man or women was 35 years.

What animals lived in the Stone Age?

These were the animals that lived in the Stone Age woolly mammoths, sabre tooth tiger, woolly rhinos, hyenas, giant ground sloths, fish, deer and more

Glossary

Woolly mammoths

a giant type of animal

Stone Age an age we named that is in the past

Skin a couple of layers that grow on you

