In the beginning, when the Earth was new, the Cherokee people lived in total darkness. They had no way of lighting their houses or lighting their way as they travelled about.

Understandably, Fox said it wasn't fair. The people on the other side of the world had the Sun and had plenty of light and warmth, but they were too greedy to share it. So the next day, Possum said he would steal the Sun. He said that he could hide the Sun in his beautiful, big, bushy tail.

When he got to the other side of the world, Possum found the Sun hanging in a tree, blazing bright. Without hesitation, Possum stepped forward bravely and took a piece of the Sun. He hid it in his big, bushy tail.
