DANGEROUS DRAGON DESCENDS ON SCHOOL

dragon wrecked the Year 1 classrooms. It ripped up the children's work, turned over tables and smashed the toilets to pieces. Experts say that this amount of damage must have been caused by the dragon whipping its tail around.

Next, the dragon climbed the stairs and entered the Year 2 classrooms. Upstairs, the dragon caused further damage. It scorched the walls, melted the interactive whiteboard and destroyed the displays.

"I was shaking from head to foot," said Ms Noble in a statement to the police. Ms Noble has done some research and concluded that the dragon must have travelled to Heymann from some mountains because they are normally found living in caves.

The police are conducting a thorough investigation into the dragon's visit and have reassured locals that there is nothing to fear. The police inspector said, "I don't think the dragon will be back." Heymann News will keep you updated on the story.

The dragon was seen heading towards Derby.

On Monday 18th January at 5 o'clock in the morning, a dragon entered Heymann Primary School. It caused a lot of damage and stayed for about an hour, before being spotted by a neighbour flying away in the direction of Derby.

The school's head teacher, Ms Noble, was alerted by the police that the school alarm had been activated at around 5 o'clock that morning. When police arrived at the school, they were amazed to find a dragon had managed to break in and cause chaos inside.

It is thought that the dragon smashed the windows to get inside. First, the
